ingdale, N.Y., maker of guitar and violin strings. A set of the company's violins strings sold for about £22.50 ($33.50) in England two years ago, which made them slightly more expensive than those of their key competitor, which was selling strings at £21. But thanks to the decline of the dollar since then, the same set of D'Addario strings sells for about £24 today, while the competitor is now £27.

"Our competitors in the [violin-string] business are all European," says James D'Addario, the company's chief executive. "With the cost of the euro, they've just become far more expensive in every market, including the U.S." And China, as well: D'Addario's sales of violin strings there are up nearly 400% this year.

The company, which had $115 million in revenue last year, says it is making more than 550,000 strings a day at its Farmingdale plant, up from about 400,000 18 months ago. A large chunk of this is flowing to guitar manufacturers in Asia, a segment of D'Addario's overall business that's up 40% this year. Even though the company in, we shouldn't be fighting and hitting each other over the head over little things, stupid things, needlessly chafing ones. When I would think of this the past few years I'd always return to one thing, a prime example of the old way of doing politics. This was the movement, now quashed, to alter the Constitution of the United States to outlaw... flag burning. Imagine changing that great document for such a stupid thing. As if it meant anything if an idiot burned a flag; as if a lot of idiots were even burning flags—which they weren't, and aren't. I called it a movement, but of course it wasn't: it was a political game played by one team in order to embarrass the other. "He doesn't love our flag—he won't even protect it!" Boo! goes the crowd.

And yet the oddest thing is...the crowd knows it's being played. They know their buttons are being pushed. And this doesn't leave them feeling more inspired by, more trusting in, the system. So much of our silliness is, in the end, destructive.

And so I came to think this: What we need most right now, at this moment, is a kind of patriotic grace—a grace that takes the long view, apprechews the politically cheap and cumulative. That admits affective respect. That encourages them to knowledges that the small things that divide us are not worthy of mention; that agrees that the things that can be done to ease the stress feel as a nation should be emphasized while those that encourage division as a nation should be seen as

SO WHERE are we now? This into the present time, the landscape on which the challenge is possible, but afraid to move.

It is autumn and America is having a season that it has been through. The whole year was confusing the professional politicians, leaving the experts in their heads, and giving the people a feeling—so precious, so rare—that the people are in charge. The decisions, not pollsters.

In the small adjacent street where the crackheads tend to hang out, my prints and contact-sheets are examined with lots of exclamations and remarks. A woman looks at her portrait, saying: "It's me, it's me... look, it's me!" I get the impression that she has never seen a picture of herself - or if she has, long ago. Another woman takes her contact-sheet, moves away, studies it, and painstakingly tears it up.

Raphaël Dallaporta, B40, USA / Vietnam, tirage Ilfochrome, 30x24 cm, de la série Antipersonnel – Blast Mine, 2004. The B-40 antipersonnel mine is a Vietnamese adaptation of the BLU-24/B US-made cluster bomb. When activated, the homemade mine contains enough explosive and fragmenting pieces to blow off a leg. Despite the destruction of 4 million mines and 8 million items of unexploded ordnance (UXO) since 1975, it is estimated that 16.478 million square meters of land in Vietnam is still contaminated by mines and UXO. d : 60 mm wght : 700 g

La patronne avait donné une liste de mots: «oui, merci, bonjour et au revoir.» C'était les seuls qu'Aina, 18 ans, avait le droit de prononcer. La journée commençait à 6 heures: préparer le petit déjeuner pour les deux enfants de la famille, puis repassage, aspirateur, lessive, vaisselle, jardinage, cuisine... Jusqu'à minuit. Aina mangeait dans une assiette «à part» les restes du repas de la famille. Elle dormait sur le carrelage de la salle de bains.

Aina avait quitté Tananarive, capitale de Madagascar, sur une promesse: «un travail, de l'argent pour envoyer à ma famille, la possibilité de poursuivre mes études.» Prisonnière pendant deux ans, agressée, menacée, elle n'a touché aucun salaire.

Une voisine a finalement remarqué dans le jardin cette «jeune fille maigre qui ne parlait pas». Elle lui a donné de la crème pour soigner ses mains déformées par les crevasses. Elle a appelé le CCEM. Aujourd'hui, Aina est aide-soignante en région parisienne. Ses «employeurs» ont été condamnés à six mois de prison avec sursis, et 4500 euros d'amende.

En 2001, Legba, une togolaise de 30 ans, a accepté un travail de garde d'enfants en France. « Je suis arrivée le 25 mars 2001. Ils sont venus me chercher à l'aéroport. La première chose qu'ils m'ont dit c'est: Donnez-nous les papiers. » Dans le modeste appartement d'Élancourt, en banlieue parisienne, Legba est prisonnière. « Je ne pouvais sortir pour faire les courses. Ils me chronométraient. Si je mettais trop longtemps, il me criaient dessus. J'avais interdiction d'adresser la parole aux gens dans la rue. Ils me disaient: Si tu fais ça, tuiras en prison. » Chaque jour, Legba subit les humiliations de ses patrons. « A manger, ils me donnaient du riz brisé pour chiens. Quand je croisais l'homme dans le couloir, il me poussait contre le mur en criant: Tu sens mauvais! Quand je sortais avec la femme, elle me disait: Marche derrière moi, tu n'as pas la même valeur que moi. » Legba s'enfuit. « J'ai crié: Je veux sortir ! L'homme a hurlé: Non ! Il m'a poursuivie dans l'escalier. M'a fait tomber du premier étage jusqu'en bas. Quand j'étais par terre, il m'a donné des coups de pieds. Puis il m'a giflée, giflée, giflée. J'avais tellement mal que pendant longtemps je ne pouvais plus marcher. Mais ils ont refusé de m'emmonter à l'hôpital. » Au bout d'un an, Legba est libérée grâce à l'intervention d'un voisin. « Il a fallu qu'il aille voir quatre fois les policiers. Ils ne le croyaient pas. » La justice a condamné le couple à payer 10000 euros à Legba. Ils n'en ont versé que 3000.

Nous ne sommes, jusqu'à présent, aucunement fixés sur notre sort. Il va sans dire que l'attente comporte des heures sombres. La vie en une communauté aussi grande et aussi diversément composée n'est pas toujours facile. En revanche, il faut reconnaître qu'il règne dans le camp un esprit de camaraderie bienfaisante et que les autorités font preuve de vraie loyauté.

"Il s'agit d'une photographie aérienne de Beyrouth large de 4 mètres sur 3, découpée en 3 000 fragments collés sur un miroir. L'image disparaissait progressivement car chaque visiteur emportait avec lui un petit fragment numéroté de l'image, derrière laquelle on pouvait lire : Beyrouth n'existe pas." J.Hadjithomas et K.Joreige, entretien avec Léa Gauthier, Mouvement, 25.09.06

I RANG. I WAS ADMITTED WITH THE CUSTOMARY PRECAUTIONS AND FOUND MYSELF IN A GREAT ROOM ILLUMINATED AT ONE END BY A FEW LAMPS. ON ENTERING, ONE STEPPED BACK TWO CENTURIES IN TIME. TIME, WHICH FLOWS SO FAST, DID NOT SEEM TO HAVE PASSED OVER THIS HOUSE AND, LIKE A CLOCK THAT ONE HAD FORGOTTEN TO REWIND, ITS HAND EVER POINTED TO THE SAME DATE.
